

Onderwerp: The hexagonal structure of water, by the Helaman Group

Excerpts from Miracle Molecular Structure of Water and The Healing Energies of Water .

Everything is interrelated. Each individual connects in some way to the wider universe. This perspective suits the study of water, the ultimate holistic substance. All of life's processes are dependent upon energy. Every object and every substance, whether natural or manufactured, has its own vibrational pattern. Every living thing consists of energy vibrating at a specific frequency. The simple example of water boiling in a pot sums up the way matter and its changing states are characterized by its energy. Liquid water boils, then transforms to steam and may eventually condense into droplets, or may form ice. Water is constantly transforming into a different state, creating the energy transformation upon which all life depends. Our bodies are a collection of organs and cells vibrating at different frequencies. Water is the clue to resonance, the channel through which all living things are able to communicate with others.

Water stores and transfers frequency information, it mediates vibrational energies. When a molecule of any substance meets water, its potential for communication increases a thousand fold! It is known that 70% of the body is made of water. While water is not medicinal in and by itself, we know that it has tremendous preventive powers in the body. If water is healthy, it can pick up and transmit the correct vibrational information.

Because water is so familiar, its peculiar physical properties and behaviour are often overlooked. Water should be a gas at room temperature, which it obviously is not because hydrogen bonds join the liquid together into a mobile fabric of knots and holes. Conceptually, a cup full of water molecules could chain together into one giant molecule! As a result of these hydrogen bonds, water has several abnormal properties. For instance, it shows maximum density at 4° C. When compared with other hydrides, water has a melting point, boiling point, heat of fusion, and heat of vaporization much higher than would be expected. The viscosity of water shows a peculiar decrease with increasing pressure above one atmosphere. When most substances contract when they solidify, water expands, becoming lighter than an equal volume of water, and floats. Throughout the world our water sources are becoming more contaminated and depleted. Consequently, we are adding more chemicals to the water to insure the quality of water is satisfactory for consumption. This tampering with our drinking water is reducing the amount of oxygen in the water, thus making it harder to digest and limiting the value to our human bodies. The Nikken Optimizer is a powerful tool that changes the very structure of water, making it more helpful for the body. The Optimizer brings water more in harmony with life itself. Pi-water, hexagonal, or structured water, all refer to changing the way the individual water molecules group together.

Municipal water can contain groupings of 12 or more molecules per cluster; hexagonal water has 6 molecules in a stable, compact structure, which is more metabolically active. Homeopathy is based on the idea that the energy pattern of a substance can be remembered and transferred or communicated even though the original substance in the water has been diluted to beyond measurability. Kirlian photography and other vibrational analysis techniques can show that optimized water is water that is in harmony with life. Hexagonal water allows oxygen to be dissolved in a supersaturated state. The water is then able to supply oxygen to the cells more efficiently. Hexagonal water allows oxygen to form in smaller clusters which can penetrate the cells in the body faster. When oxygen is lacking, the cell breathing is not smooth, the foodstuffs are not completely burned, and wastes are accumulated, resulting in a deteriorated living environment. Most people think we take oxygen only through the air we breathe, but foaming oxygen increased by magnetized water activates the kinetic energy, stimulates the mucous membrane while passing through the stomach, small and large intestines, and promote blood circulation to the blood vessels. The oxygen also takes out the toxic gases and wastes in the intestines, which provide a clean intestinal environment as well as a clear blood stream. An excess amount of oxygen existing in the magnetized hexagonal water can easily be absorbed and penetrated into the blood within 30 seconds. Lack of oxygen to the brain may cause one to be lethargic and have a lower attention span. Over an extended period of time, anoxemia will certainly lead to dementia and eventually death. While water is not medicinal in and of itself, we know it has great preventive powers within the body. When you use the hexagonal water for cooking it will add nutrients to the food and improve the taste. The use of hexagonal water will improve the quality of your skin if used on a regular basis.

